

Frenchtown Rural Fire District

Frenchtown Rural Fire District is a combination department consisting of volunteer, career and support personnel who work closely together to provide professional emergency response services to the communities of Frenchtown, Alberton, Huson, Evaro and Missoula, Montana.

Located in western Montana, the district is an all-hazard response department with a wide variety of terrain, weather and infrastructure. Notable are over 30 miles of Interstate 90, hundreds of miles of state, rural and residential roadways. Crossing the district is heavy use rail line that sees daily transportation of all types of cargo, including industrial and commercial product transportation, lumber, coal, oil, processed fuels and chemicals, and countless consumer goods. Outdoor recreation is abundant with access to hiking, fishing, hunting, cycling and climbing among the many activities and backcountry adventures available to the outdoor enthusiast.

The recreational use of the nationally known Clark Fork River and Alberton Gorge provide challenging adventures in and on the water. Our close proximity to the Missoula International Airport along with the varied industrial and commercial ventures throughout the area require close cooperation and training with our neighboring agencies. The majority of the district's residents live in close proximity to or within a beautiful and expansive wildland urban interface surrounded by National Forests and State Lands that provide secluded rural living with quick access to the nearby city of Missoula. The Frenchtown area is centrally located between Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks, and just a short driving distance from the Bob Marshal and Selway Bitterroot Wilderness areas and the Lolo and Stevensville National Forests. There is something for everyone within the Frenchtown Missoula valley area!

VOLUNTEER

Traditional Volunteers live within the district and serve their community through 911 response, continuous training, event participation and administrative support .

Non-traditional Volunteers live outside of the district and serve in the same manner as our Traditional Volunteers in exchange for certifications, experience, and agency affiliation.

RESIDENT VOLUNTEER

Resident Volunteers live within the district's stations and adhere to a set shift and training schedule while taking part in a focused training and education program designed to assist in preparation for a successful career in emergency services.

CAREER

Local 4654 Career Firefighters are full-time employees of the district providing professional structure, wildland, rescue and emergency medical response. In addition, the career firefighters assist with administrative duties, including but not limited to; public education, fire prevention, member training, career development, and preventative health services.
